THE other case was that of Senator Fulton of Oregon. Through Francis Heney I was prosculing men who were implicated in a vast network of conspiracy against the law in connection with the theft bile land in Oregon. I had been acting on Senator Fulton's recom-ations for office, in the usual manner. Hency had been insisting that Fullon was in league with the men we were prosecuting, and that he had recommended unfit men. Fullon had been protesting against my following Hener's advice, particularly as regards appointing Judge Wolverton as agreed to divide the fees with it if he were appointed, and that you finally recommended the reappointment of H with the knowledge that if H were appointed he would abstain from prosecuting B for criminal misconduct, this being why B advocated H's claims for reappointment. If you care to make any statement in the matter I shall of course be glad to hear it. As the district judge of Oregon I shall appoint Judge Wolverton." In the letter I of course gave in full the names indicated above by initials. Sena-tor Fulton gave no explanation. I therefore ceased to consult him about partments in which the crookedness had occurred—there was no question pop, and ma sed. tion was brought before the courts. They were uniformly sustained. For example, prior to 1967 statutes relating to the disposition of coal lands had been construed as fixing the flat price at $10 to $20 per acre. The result was that valuable coal lands were sold for wholly inadequate prices, chiefly to big corporations. By executive order the coal lands were withdrawn and ernment agents. porations. By executive order the coal lands were withdrawn and if people use to it for entry until proper classification was placed thereon by government. There was a great claim or that I was narrowed by government. estricutions imposed were illegal; that the executive orders were illegal The supreme court sustained the government. In the same way our attitude in the water power question was sustained, the supreme court holding that the federal government had the rights we claimed over streams that are or may be declared navigable by congress. Again, when Oklahoma be-came a state we were ubliged to use the executive power to protect Indian ights and property, for there had been an enormous amount of fraud i

In connection with the Indians, by the way, it was again and again necessary to assert the position of the president as steward of the whole people ary to assert the position of the president as steward of the whole people had a capital Indian commissioner, Francis E. Leupp. I found that could sely on his judgment not to get me into fights that were unnecessary and therefore I always backed him to the limit when he told me that fight was necessary. On one accasion, for example, congress passed a b $1.50 an acre I refused to sign it, and turned the mat Leupp. The billwas accordingly withdrawn, amended so as Leupp. The billwas accordingly withdrawn, amended so us to sateguare the welfare of the Indians, and the minimum price raised to $5 an acre. In another case, where there had been a division among the Sac and Fox Indians, part of the tribe removing to the lowa delegation in congress, backed by two lowans who wer oureau. Leupp profested against the bill, and I vetoed it. A subsequent bill was passed an the lines laid down by the Indian bureau, referring the whole controversy to the courts, and the supreme court in the end justified our position by deciding against the lowa seceders and awarding the money to the Oklahoma stay-at-homes.

As to all action of this kind there have long been two schools of political thought, upheld with equal sincerity. The division has not normally been along political, but temperamental lines.
